*Respondents were asked a series of questions about their attachment to politics. They were:

1. Are you registered to vote?
2. Are you likely to vote in national elections?
3. Have you considered going into politics?
4. How often do you follow political news?
5. Have you ever volunteered for a political campaign?

Based on their responses to these questions, respondents could score anywhere from 5 to 12 points, with 5 being the most engaged in politics and 12 being the least engaged in politics.
Civics included those respondents who scored 5 or 6. This included 83 respondents or 20.5 % of the sample.
Disengaged included those who scored 9 or more. This included 90 respondents or 22.4 % of the sample.
