Dr. Nhora Lucía Serrano Lecture

Each of these comics and comics strips has played a crucial role in representing, constructing, and reifying the immigrant subject and the immigrant experience in the twentieth century.

Dr. Nhora Lucia Serrano, Visiting Scholar in the Department of Comparative Literature at Harvard University, will discuss how comics from around the world were shaped by the immigrant story, and how they inscribe and reinscribe the immigrant identity and experience.

"Every comic about immigration is a story about an individual, and every comic about this theme wants to show... a story about humanity...a universal story."
- Hélène Bouillon, Curator of the exhibit "Albums-Bande dessinée et immigration: 1913-2013" at the Cité Nationale de l'Histoire de l'Immigration in Paris

Todd Clewell has been playing traditional music for more than 35 years. He has spent most of his life in Southcentral Pennsylvania. He will be playing and talking about his Sarah Armstrong fiddle project that has sparked the interest of many seeking knowledge of the music of Southwestern Pennsylvania. His research on Sarah Armstrong and the music she played resulted in the issue of his CD "Sarah Armstrong's Tunes." He has taught these tunes at the Greenwood Furnace Gathering and Maidencreek Festival. This past year the Derry Area Historical Society awarded him the John Pomeroy award for preserving history. Last year, as a tribute to Sarah Armstrong, the DAHS invited Todd and the "Keystone Rebels" to play at the Railroad Days festival in Derry, PA. Todd plays fiddle, guitar, banjo, mandolin and bass and is a regular on the Contra Dance scene. For more information see: www.toddclewell.com

"Existing in the Age of Data Mining"

A virtual-reality installation by Ben Salzman ’14. In the last few years more data has been produced than in all of human history. How and why humanity gathers, stores, and utilizes this data fascinates me. Personal information is constantly collected and is often exposed or sold without consent. Issues of privacy and attacks on our civil liberties have become a growing international concern. "Existing in the Age of Data Mining" is intended to capture the zeitgeist of this age of digital surveillance. The interactive installation prompts the viewer to reflect upon their privacy while also evoking feelings of fear, paranoia, and wonder about how our digital identity is being viewed and collected.

"Saving Hubble" and "The Home Planet"

Join us for alternating presentations of "Saving Hubble" by David Gaynes ’99 and "The Home Planet" by Lauren Koss ’00.

"Saving Hubble", a new independent documentary film, examines NASA's decision in 2004 to cancel the famed Hubble Space Telescope, and introduces us to the people who united to save it. Many films have been made about what Hubble teaches us about the universe. This is the first time a film about Hubble has asked "What does this machine say about us?" "Saving Hubble" is the story of ordinary people finding a voice, and a love letter to the machine that stands as humanity's ambassador to the expanding universe.

"The Home Planet" is the 10th collaboration between Samuel Pellman and Lauren Koss, who did video accompaniments for Pellman's Selected Planets, a suite of compositions, in 2003-2004. A version of the Earth-themed piece was part of the earlier project, but the 2014 version has been shortened and includes all new footage. The audio consists almost exclusively of environmental sounds that were recorded within a short distance of Clinton, New York. The video, shot over two years, spans the East coast from Florida to Maine. Lauren found it a tall order to convey the scope of our planet and its diverse inhabitants, great and small, and to find the right balance of reverence, criticism and whimsy. She is still plagued by the urge to shoot something for the project almost every day.
